DELEGATE TYPES

AT-LARGE

At-large (AL) delegates are statewide delegates, which must be residents of that state and are selected at-large. Each state receives ten AL delegates and bonus AL delegates are awarded to states that meet certain criteria, including whether the state has a Republican governor, Republican U.S. senator, Republican majority of the state legislature, etc. Territories are awarded a specified number of AL delegates.

CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT

Congressional district (CD) delegates must be residents of and selected by the congressional district they represent. Each state is allocated three CD delegates per congressional district.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE MEMBERS

Each state's three RNC members (national committeeman, national committeewoman, and state chair) are automatically national convention delegates. These three delegates are the only national convention delegates that do not have alternate delegates.

The information contained in this document was compiled by the RNC Counsel's Office based on the Rule No. 16(f) filing as submitted and certified by the states and territories to the Secretary of the RNC.

ALLOCATION METHODS

PROPORTIONAL

Proportional methods of allocation divide the state's delegates among candidates based on the state's preference poll results. Most proportional states have a threshold percentage that must be reached before a candidate is eligible for any delegates. Further, proportional states may award delegates on a winner-take-all basis for candidates who receive over 50% of the vote. States can proportionally allocate all their CD and AL delegates together (all the delegates in one pot) or can proportionally allocate their AL delegates based on the statewide vote and the CD delegates based on each congressional district vote. Proportional allocation is required for all states with preference votes between March 1 and March 14.

WINNER-TAKE-ALL

Winner-take-all methods of allocation provide that the plurality winner of the statewide preference poll receives all the state's delegates. States are permitted to allocate their delegates in a winner-take-all method after March 14.

HYBRID

Hybrid states combine multiple types of allocation methods. The two most common versions of a hybrid model are:

- (1) The plurality winner of the statewide poll receives all the state's AL delegates and the plurality winner of each congressional district poll receives all three of that congressional district's CD delegates.
- (2) Some or all delegates are elected directly on the ballot. Under the Rules of the Republican Party, delegates elected directly on the ballot are not required to be bound.
